"Microsoft and its critics both worked to ensure their views were reflected in the comments. Americans for Technology Leadership, made up of Microsoft and several others friendly to the software giant, offered letter writers extra chances to win a handheld computer."

The above quote is a perfect example of why Microsoft must be reigned in. Microsoft will always stoop to any level to be sure that their products remain the only platform offered to consumers...in this case, by trying to bribe letters of comment for their own support.

Please add my name to the ranks of those who believe that Microsoft must be controlled by an order with more effective enforcement and with more strict controls of their anti-competitive practices.
